VHS Wildlife Animal Fun Facts

PEAFOWLS (PEACOCKS)

Sentosa is believed to have the largest number of peafowls (more popularly known as peacocks) in Singapore. It comprises a mixture of Indian blue peafowls and Javan green peafowls. They are omnivorous and their diet consists of seeds, insects, fruits, small mammals and reptiles.

They have beautiful feathers that can be displayed in a spectacular fan of magnificent colours.

They are most frequently spotted within the Heritage Courtyard area.

Surrounded by the peace and tranquility of lush greenery, it is a common sight to spot different types of animals within Village Hotel Sentosa precinct as 70% of Sentosa Island is covered by secondary rainforest, and is home to many different kinds of animals. Here are some interesting facts of the wildlife that you may have spotted at Village Hotel Sentosa.

ORIENTAL PIED HORNBILLS

The oriental pied hornbills are the only wild hornbills found in Singapore. Unlike most other hornbills, oriental pied hornbills can be found outside primary rainforests and may visit inhabited areas to feed on fruit.

Oriental pied hornbills eat mainly fruit, but they do eat insects and small animals including reptiles, birds and mammals.

VHS Wildlife Animal Fun Facts

RED JUNGLEFOWL (JUNGLE ROOSTER)

The red junglefowl is the wild ancestor of the domestic chicken. They can be found from the Western Himalayas to Southern China and throughout Southeast Asia.

Omnivorous by nature, their diet consists of insects, roots, fruits and seeds and forage in large parties.

The red junglefowl was included in the first Resident of Singapore William Farquhar's collection of natural-history drawings, indicating their presence in the Malay Peninsula in the early 19th century.

COMMON PALM CIVET (CIVET CAT)

Common palm civet is one of the species of civet that can be seen in Singapore. Nocturnal by nature, they can be found living in trees and high places such as forests, parks, mangroves and even roof spaces of buildings in urban areas.

Being omnivorous, their diet includes fruits such as mangoes and bananas, and will eat small snakes, small birds, insects and rats. In Singapore, they frequently eat the fruits of the Fishtail Palm and seed pods of the Rain Tree.

DO YOU KNOW?

Coffee beans that have been eaten by civets and passed through their digestive system are highly valued in some neighboring countries in Southeast Asia. It is some of the most expensive coffee in the world, but comes at a cost to civets which are often poached from the wild and kept in inhumane conditions to produce the beans.
